Why is Excel still widely used in Data Analytics?

What is the difference between COUNT() and COUNTA()?

What is a Pivot Table and why is it important?

What are slicers and how do they help in dashboards?

Why is data cleaning important before analysis?

Excel is widely used because it is easy to learn, widely available, and powerful for quick analysis. It allows analysts to clean data, apply formulas, create pivot tables, and build dashboards without writing code. Many businesses already use Excel, so it remains a practical tool for daily reporting and decision-making.

COUNT() counts only cells that contain numeric values.

COUNTA() counts all non-empty cells, including text, numbers, and symbols.

COUNT() is used when working strictly with numbers, while COUNTA() is used to count total record

A Pivot Table is a tool in Excel that summarizes large datasets quickly. It helps analyze data by grouping, filtering, and calculating totals or averages. Pivot Tables are important because they make it easy to find patterns, trends, and insights without modifying the original data.

Slicers are visual filters used with Pivot Tables and Pivot Charts. They allow users to interactively filter data by categories such as Region, Year, or Category. Slicers make dashboards more user-friendly and help users explore data dynamically.

Data cleaning is important because raw data often contains errors, duplicates, and inconsistencies. Cleaning ensures accurate calculations, reliable analysis, and correct insights. Without proper data cleaning, analysis results can be misleading or incorrect.
